Lake Dwelling Museum and "Stollenwiesen" (World Cultural Heritage)

Take a trip to the past! For a first-hand experience of what you always wanted to know about the Stone Age visit the largest open-air museum in southern Germany: the Lake dwelling Museum (Pfahlbaumuseum Unteruhldingen). The 45-60 minute guided tour back in time takes visitors through the settlement and offers them a hands-on experience of the daily life of Stone and Bronze Age settlers (4000 - 850 B.C.) on the shores of Lake Constance.

The houses in the settlement display a wide variety of objects that Ötzi, the Iceman discovered in the Alps, used in his day-to-day life. Life-like scenes depicting human figures and animals, miniature models as well as objects that can be handled and the residential dwellings of the lake settlers offer a fascinating insight into the everyday life of Stone Age people.

Since June 2011, the sunken pile-dwelling settlement located in the archaeological site of "Stollenwiesen" has been added to the World Cultural Heritage list.

The Cistercian Priory was built between 1747 and 1750. The renowned baroque architects and painters Peter Thumb, Joseph Anton Feuchtmayer, and the fresco painter Gottfried Bernhard Götz worked together to create this impressive work of architecture and art. The famous sculpture of the so-called "Honigschlecker" located inside the church is an absolute must-see.
