Dear visitors to Freising, explorers of Old Bavaria, guests from far and near, and Freising residents,

As the cultural historian Wilhelm Heinrich Riehl (1823–1897) once said, "If you haven't seen Freising, you don't know Old Bavaria". Today's explorers of Freising will find a modern university city that looks to the future, that treats its great history with pride and respect, proving every day that here, in the oldest city between Regensburg and Bolzano, the heart of Old Bavaria beats with the pulse of the 21st century.

For centuries, this ancient episcopal seat has symbolized the sciences, education, art and culture. Today life sciences dominate teaching and research where once theology, philosophy and historical research were housed. The city's skyline with its two striking hills awakens our fascination in the presence of great history and a pulsating present. Cathedral Hill stands for the intellectual and cultural centre of Old Bavaria, while Weihestephan Hill is home to the internationally renowned natural sciences campus. Between the two peaks, Freising's old quarter invites visitors to stroll and browse, explore and marvel at the feast of sights to discover.

Let yourself be drawn into our culture and customs, our tradition and lifestyle, and see for yourself why our richly diverse city has become an important focus for tourism and business travel.

Experience Freising – welcome to our city!

PLEASURE FOR BODY & SOUL

Freising is a city founded on faith – and thus also a city of inns and taverns and the Old Bavarian culture of hospitality. After a packed sightseeing tour of well-known churches and nationally famous museums, it's time for a snack, refreshing the body to delight the soul. In one of our many cosy taverns.

The "oldest brewery in the world", Weihenstephan, is in Freising – and not without reason. It was naturally a monastery dedicated to St. Stephen, where beer was already brewed over 1000 years ago. Today few traces are left of the Benedictine monks and expert brewers – one such landmark is St. Corbinian's Spring.

Bavaria has always fostered close links between church and tavern, which are still central to the Old Bavarian way of life today. The cathedral towers watch over the city's faith, while also ensuring that the pleasurable side of life does not suffer, with lavish menus on church feast days, a round of beers after Sunday mass and of course the "Starkbier", strong beer that helped the monks to endure the strict Lenten fast. The strictness has gone, but the strong beer season has become Bavaria's fifth season. Body and soul belong together – and nowhere is this more certain than at Cathedral Hill.

Freising has a host of fascinating churches: the magnificent Cathedral with its mysterious crypt, the court chapel and Early Gothic Church of St. John on Cathedral Hill, the parish church of St. George or the Baroque church of the former Premonstratensian Order of Neustift, the Gottesackerkirche or St. Clare's. So much beauty is dazzling – so what a good thing that Freising's old quarter also offers plentiful inns and taverns. With menus of hearty Bavarian specialities and eminently quaffable beer. Great places to let time go by, sit back and chat to your neighbour. About everything under the sun – and about how pleasurable it can be to keep body and soul together.

*"If you haven't seen Freising,
you don't know Old Bavaria!"*

(W. H. Riehl)

Freising is everything:
old and young,
steeped in history and open to the future.
A place where worlds
meet. The cathedral towers watch over an ancient city which is vibrant with young, modern life - all tempered by its characteristic equanimity and tranquillity.

It was around the year 720 that Corbinian, a missionary later to become the first bishop of Freising, crossed the Alps to Rome. One dark night deep in the mountains, a hungry bear devoured Corbinian's pack-horse. Corbinian ordered the bear to carry his baggage to Rome, where the saint released him into the wilderness with thanks. This legend explains why the arms of the City of Freising show a saddled bear. The ancient arms of the prince-bishops additionally show a Moorish figure, the origins of which are shrouded in history; not even a legend remains. Yet it too is so much a part of Freising and its Cathedral Hill that Pope Benedict included the bear and the Moor in his own coat of arms as a reminder of his life in Freising.

Mons doctus

Cathedral Hill. Imagine it as the nucleus of Freising, the site of the ducal palatinate of the Agilolfing dynasty. The Cathedral towers over the spot where Freising's first Church of St. Mary stood.

Cathedral Hill is visible from afar. Yet once it afforded an even more imposing vision; old engravings show a host of church spires, warning travellers of the presence of this towering spiritual and imperial city - as Freising was until its secularization in 1802/03. This was the seat of government

The remains of St. Corbinian lie in the Crypt and are exhibited in ceremonial processions.

The enormous painting by Peter Paul Rubens focuses the attention on events at the altar.

of both the bishopric of Freising and its prince-bishopric, the secular princely state with its many estates in Bavaria, Austria, Krain, Tyrol and Styria, ruled over by the prince-bishop both as religious leader and secular lord.

His life was occasionally made difficult by the Bavarian dukes and electors and their constant attempts to restrict the power of the prince-bishop in his own city and other estates. A particularly decisive event for Freising's future occurred in 1158, when Duke Henry the Lion succeeded in transferring the toll rights for Oberföhring Bridge, owned by the Bishop of Freising, to Munich: we no longer know exactly how. Bishop Otto I naturally resisted this "dispossession" and achieved at least partial success: Munich was obliged to pay part of its toll revenues to Freising until as late as 1803.

Scholarly Centre

The same Bishop Otto (1138-58) is considered one of the great philosophers of history of the Middle Ages; however, the first Bavarian historian to be recorded was Bishop Ardeo of Freising (764-83). Scholarliness has never left Freising, and is in evidence not only in one of Bavaria's most beautiful libraries, the Baroque Cathedral Library, but also in the hall of the former prince-bishops' college, for example - today the Asam Theatre and Freising's most magnificent venue. The interior was decorated by Georg Asam, whose sons, Egid Quirin and Cosmas Damian Asam, later converted Freising Cathedral into a glorious, glowing Late Baroque masterpiece.

The stone relief of Frederick I Barbarossa watches over the Cathedral from the inner portal.

The romantic courtyard of the Prince-Bishops' residence is today part of Kardinal-Döpfner-Haus, the educational centre of Munich-Freising Archdiocese.

The façade and inner portal of the Cathedral still clearly show its Romanesque origins: And the crypt, the last resting-place of St. Corbinian and others, has the magical Beasts' Pillar at its centre, depicting a gentle woman with a flower subjugating nightmarish images of knights battling against monsters and being devoured. Unfortunately the symbolism underlying these images is today lost to us.

But the Renaissance and other architectural styles are also present on Cathedral Hill. The walls of the Princes' Cloisters (Fürstengang) display a collection of portraits of Freising's prince-bishops for our examination: from pious, withdrawn men of the Church to haughty rulers exuding princely assurance, each era had the bishops it needed to steer Freising's ship safely through the storms of history. The diocesan museum, housing Germany's largest collection of religious art and dubbed "Freising's spiritual gallery" by art historian Herbert Schindler, exhibits a selection of works that trace Freising's significance throughout the centuries.

In the Shadow of the Cathedral

The bourgeois city of Old Freising clusters around Cathedral Hill. Freising was the spiritual and cultural heart of Old Bavaria until the late 14th century. Later it became a prosperous country city, and has retained an atmosphere of placid, cheery tranquillity: houses with rococo facades announcing their owners' affluence and wealth, the Town Hall and 15th-century St. George's Church, whose Baroque tower hails St. Peter and Paul's Church and its Premonstratensian Order, founded by Bishop Otto I (around 1142) and today the District Office. Originally planned as the equal of the Cathedral, in 1756 the church was designed as a jewel of Bavarian rococo by artists including Franz Xaver Feichtmayr, Johann Baptist Zimmermann and Ignaz Günther.

Short History of Freising

The Agilolfing dukes were probably not the first to settle on the landmark of Cathedral Hill. As early as the Stone Age its special status was well-known. With the advent of St. Corbinian, Freising became the spiritual and cultural centre of Old Bavaria and later an independent prince-bishopric. Only in the 13th century was Munich able to free itself from Freising's dominance and shift the balance of power. After 1800 the rural Bavarian city slumbered until reawoken by its old virtue of scholarliness. Today Freising is a youthful university city with an atmosphere of relaxed joviality.

approx. 4200 B.C. The first traces of settlement on Cathedral Hill date from the New Stone Age.

approx. 1700–1500 and 1200–700 B.C. In two Bronze Age eras, mountain settlements on Cathedral Hill achieve supra-regional significance.

around 700 A.D. The Agilolfing dukes establish a palatinate on Cathedral Hill. Regensburg, Passau, Salzburg and Freising are the centres of their Old Bavarian duchy.

around 720 The Agilolfing dukes call the peripatetic West Franconian bishop Corbinian to Freising. He is the city's first bishop and is honoured today as the patron of Freising and its bishopric.

739 Foundation of the bishoprics of Regensburg, Passau, Salzburg and Freising by St Bonifatius. Freising becomes an episcopal city.

996 Emperor Otto III awards Freising market rights, first turning the spotlight of history onto the "bourgeois" town at the foot of Cathedral Hill.

1021 A Benedictine abbey is founded on Weihenstephan Hill, also with a tradition dating back to the 8th century.

1142 Bishop Otto of Freising founds the Premonstratensian monastery of Neustift to the east of the ancient city.

1158 Bishop Otto of Freising, the great politician and scholar and the most significant figure among the bishops of the ancient bishopric. The same year is traditionally given as the foundation of Munich. The town arises under Freising's rule but overtakes the episcopal city in the following centuries.

around 1300 The Moor of Freising is depicted in the crest of the Freising bishops. As prince-bishops of the Holy Roman Empire they reign over a small secular territory which holds estates as far afield as Austria and Slovenia.

1724 Prince-Bishop Eckher holds a great celebration to commemorate the thousandth anniversary of St Corbinian's arrival, further crowning the image of the Baroque episcopal city with glory.

1802/03 In the process of mediatization and secularization, the secular territories of the Freising prince-bishop are incorporated into Kurbayern (later known as Bavaria). Monasteries are closed, the episcopal seat is moved to Munich in 1821 and the bishopric elevated to the Archbishopric of Munich and Freising. The residence of the prince-bishops becomes a Bavarian country town, its profile dominated by schools and official and military institutions. On Cathedral Hill seminary institutions are founded in the new archbishopric. In 1803 a state forestry school is founded in the premises of the secularized Benedictine abbey of Weihenstephan.

1858 The Munich – Landshut railway opens.

1945 In the final days of World War 2, on 18 April, the area around Freising Station is bombed.

1968 Cathedral Hill is reorganized, the college and priests' seminary closed or moved to Munich. The following years see the establishment of the Kardinal-Döpfner-Haus educational centre and the diocesan museum.

1972 As a result of territorial reforms, Freising loses its independent city status and becomes a district seat.

1992 The new Munich Airport opens in the vicinity.

1994 As part of the Bavarian state development programme, Freising is upgraded from a "medium-sized district centre" to "potential major centre". Key location factors include the international "green" study and research centre at Weihenstephan. The city's unemployment rate is continuously the lowest in the country.

2006 Freising's citizens are concerned about Munich Airport's plans for a third runway. Pope Benedict XVI, whose career is closely linked to Munich, visits the ancient episcopal city on 14 September.

How the "Hill of Nourishment" became the "Hill of Learning"

The spring on Weihenstephan Hill is said to have been struck out of the rock by St. Corbinian, and still flows today. Only ruins now mark the site of the former Benedictine abbey. Like their brethren everywhere, the monks at Weihen-stephan brewed beer, and because beer in Bavaria is considered a basic food, Weihenstephan Hill was quickly renamed "Nährberg", or the "Hill of Nourishment". The spiritual scholars, deep in conversation and thought, must often have wandered from hill to hill and enjoyed a beer – if only to be nearer to the blue Bavarian heavens. Throughout the centuries these encounters developed into an active partnership. Weihenstephan Brewery is said to be the oldest in the world, and the University's Brewing Faculty which drew on this venerable expertise is today considered among the most modern international establishments of its kind. The monastery traditions, particularly in horticulture, prepared a fertile foundation for the institutes and faculties which transformed the "hill of nourishment" into a "hill of learning", or "mons doctus" – and so modern and future-oriented into the bargain.

The Green Centre

Today named Centre of Life and Food Sciences Weihenstephan, the site concentrates all these areas of research expertise at Technische Universität München (TUM) to seek future-proof solutions for fundamental challenges such as global food supplies, dwindling raw materials and climate change. A "scholarly" hill, then, where courses are set for the future – for us, and for the whole world. It is thus only natural that researchers and scientists from all over the world collect here. To share and discuss research findings, to work, study and conduct scholarly discourse – often, as in ancient times, while taking a stroll. Through the show gardens of the Landscape Architecture Research Centre, for example – the largest and most important in Germany. Or in the Court Gardens of the former monastery. And before they know it, they meet up under the chestnut trees of the brewery for refreshment afterwards. Modern as the brewery is, it has never forgotten its original purpose. The Bräustüberl tavern and shady beer garden are ideal places for a rustic picnic. The fame of the beer and "Obatzte", a mixture of Camembert, butter and other flavourings, extends far beyond their home region.

And enjoyed properly, the beer is actually an inspiration; many an earth-shaking idea has been scribbled on a beer mat.

Modern Art

Afterwards, visitors are refreshed and at leisure to continue. Freising has always been a centre of art, and has integrated modern art into its cityscape. A stroll through the extensive campus shows how the landscape, modern architecture and art have been blended into a unique setting. Works by famous artists including Fritz König, Alf Lechner or Ernst Hermanns have helped to underpin the lofty and essential status of modernity today in this venerable city.

POPE BENEDICT XVI HIS FREISING

The arms of Pope Benedict XVI. feature two elements referring to his life in Freising: the legendary Bear of St. Corbinian and the Moor of Freising. In fact there are many and deep bonds linking Joseph Ratzinger to the episcopal city. He attended the priests' seminary on Cathedral Hill and was ordained as a priest in Freising Cathedral in 1951 with his brother Georg. From the winter semester of 1954/55 he occupied the Chair of Dogmatic and Fundamental Theology at Freising University and lived in an apartment on Cathedral Hill. One of the most outstanding professors of this renowned institution, he had a lasting influence on generations of students. During his time as archbishop of Munich and

Relief of the Pope, Cathedral Hill

Freising he regularly visited the city, home to the archbishopric's co-cathedral, and received the Gold Medal of the City of Freising before leaving for Rome. In 2004 he made personal visits to Freising.

When Joseph Ratzinger returned to his Old Bavarian home – and naturally to Freising – from 9 to 14 September 2006, he was already Pope, and signed the city's Golden Book as Benedict XVI. In early 2010, Pope Benedict XVI was made a Freeman of the City of Freising in recognition of his outstanding services. During St. Korbinian's Feast the same year, a commemorative bronze relief of the Pope was installed at the entrance to the cathedral courtyard.

Freising – at the heart of it all

Centrally located at the heart of Old Bavaria, Freising is the perfect base for discovering Bavaria's cities and sights.

For example:

Munich Airport	5 km	Deggendorf	100 km
Munich Marienplatz	43 km	Regensburg	102 km
Landshut	35 km	Passau	158 km
Ingolstadt	57 km	Nuremberg	144 km

But wherever Freising's guests are bound, when the shadows turn blue and the sun paints its last rays golden on the cobblestones, they gratefully return to Freising. To the university city where intellectual acuity thrives in a leisurely atmosphere and Old Bavarian hospitality is still real and alive. Freising awaits you.

LUITPOLDHALLE

Freising's largest events centre, often attracting over a thousand visitors, offers a full-scale array of modern event technology. Lighting and sound systems are aligned to the hall's dimensions and broad range of possibilities. However complex the requirements for stage design, size and location, successful events are assured - from major stars, famous orchestras and theatre companies to illustrious balls where magnificent fashion is paraded. Luitpoldhalle and its team are well prepared.

The perfect setting for conferences and congresses for 300 persons and over. For lectures and discussions, and for evening galas or exclusive dances. Behind the scenes, the team is expert in managing complex programmes and extensive organization, with state-of-the-art technology and a professional range of functions and services. Dedicated culinary staff produce whatever is required, from breacktime snacks to full-scale set dinners. Location and access are convenient; Luitpoldhalle is situated near the River Isar on the perimeter of the old town, easy to reach and offering ample parking - ensuring that the background of the event also runs smoothly.

LINDENKELLER

Lindenkeller can be found at the heart of the action, in the centre of young, open and vibrant Freising. Here the volume is turned up a notch, and not only because of the superior quality of the sound systems. Hot music from techno to ethno and rock to jazz, hard-hitting cabaret or avant-garde theatre - this is an environment where cultural opportunities hold sway, in turn creating a fertile foundation for events that suit this framework. The Oberhaus, with a capacity of around 200 guests, is a flexible, customizable space that is ideal for exhibitions, conferences and workshops, enabling even the most unusual ideas to be realized. The Unterhaus has a fixed stage and variable seating options. The Theke bar is perfect for informal meetings. The Restaurant serves contemporary cuisine and stunning new recipes. From spring to autumn, the beer garden is a focus for Freising natives and visitors. Young and dynamic, vibrant and active - Lindenkeller is a venue with its sights fixed firmly on the future.

ASAMTHEATER

Georg Asam, father of the two famous brothers to whom Bavaria owes so many of its world-famous masterpieces, applied his artistic skills to the utmost to present the Freising people and their guests with a magnificent Baroque theatre and ceremonial hall. In the heart of the old town, with a facade that enhances the cityscape, the theatre and foyer richly decorated with Baroque stucco and frescoes glow with a festive opulence that makes any event within these walls into a special occasion. Everything is in harmony – expectant guests, some elegant, some casual, an artistic setting and technology behind the venerable scenes that satisfies the highest standards. The prerequisites for events of style and discernment.

In summer, the inner courtyard is a special feature that ideally complements the venue. An intimate acoustic setting under the night-blue sky is ideal for chamber-style performances or smaller family celebrations. Asamtheater is a festive venue for guests that appreciate exceptional events.

KARDINAL-DÖPFNER-HAUS

Conference - education - culture are the three focal areas of Kardinal-Döpfner-Haus, the educational centre of the Archdiocese of Munich and Freising.

Amid the outstanding architecture of Freising's Cathedral Hill complex, the conference centre within the walls of the former prince-bishops' residence is visible from afar. An ideal site for contemporary seminars, conferences and meetings in a historic atmosphere and tranquil setting at the heart of Freising. The surroundings and unique view provide inspiration for concentrated, creative work and peaceful relaxation alike.

Kardinal-Döpfner-Haus is equally suitable as a conference location and centre for group travel. Knowledge-seekers can find inspiration from the broadly based programme of seminars. The extensive cultural programme with changing art exhibitions, concerts and theatre performances also attracts plentiful visitors.

Kardinal-Döpfner-Haus offers reliable, hospitable and unobtrusive service for all events and serves excellent cuisine using local produce.

Freising City Museum

Collection of Freising Historical Association

Freising Four Times Over

Freising City Museum presents exhibits from the collection of Freising Historical Association and introduces the city and its history in four main themed areas:

- Historic views, modern aerial photographs and a hands-on model demonstrating Freising's topography and cityscape.
- Freising of the Prince-Bishops: examples of religious art, life at the princes' court and the scholars' Freising.
- A further exhibit documents Freising's bourgeoisie, focusing on guild life
- The portrait series "Freising – Here's Looking At You" brings the era from the early 19th century to the present day to life.

The Old College Halls

The museum is housed in the great four-wing premises of the old Episcopal College at Marienplatz, founded in 1697 and under the direction of the Benedictines until secularization. Directly over the museum is the Asamsaal, the former main hall of the college, with frescoes by Georg Asam, father of the famous brothers. When a modern museum repository was built, graffiti from the former college detention cell was discovered and restored.

schafhof

artists' centre
of Upper Bavaria

schafhof, the European Artists' Centre of Upper Bavaria, is situated in the countryside north of Freising. Schafhof's rural location, stunning architecture and high-level cultural programme attract plentiful visitors. Café im Schafhof also provides visitors with culinary service in a creative atmosphere with magnificent views.

Built in 1819 as a barn for the king's herds of merino sheep, the "sheep yard" was renovated in the 1980s and opened as Upper Bavaria's European Artists' Centre in 2005. Today it is a place of cultural encounter at regional and international level, focusing on exploring European thought by participating in an international artists' exchange programme and organizing exhibitions by contemporary artists. Upper Bavaria awards twelve grants every year to young fine artists at the Schafhof and abroad. Other cultural activities include open studio days, craft markets, summer schools, concerts and special art education events.

Office hours: Mon – Fri 9 am – 5 pm

Exhibitions: Tue – Fri 2 pm – 7 pm, Sat and Sun 11 am – 7 pm

Munich Airport Visitors' Park

Flying high!
Lots to amaze sightseers at the Airport

The Visitors' Park of Munich Airport (by train: S1 or S8, station "Besucherpark", by car: car park P51) is an ideal excursion for young and old. Children and adults alike will be thrilled at the chance to look behind the scenes of a major modern airport. An exhibition at the Visitors' Centre forms a fascinating introduction to the world of the airport, and children can find out how an airport works on the MUCi Tour. Large groups of kindergarten or school children are always welcome. The free cinema screens exciting films for large and small, from fun knowledge-based children's TV to documentaries about the Airport fire service or travel baggage checking procedures.

The large open-air exhibition offers numerous attractions awaiting exploration: historic aircraft in original size, an ADAC emergency helicopter, a big playground with giant trampoline, adventure bridge and toddlers' area, and a great crazy golf course. Not forgetting the impressive views from Visitors' Hill of the take-off and landing runways and events on the apron of Terminal 1.

A popular feature is the 50-minute Airport Tour, which takes visitors by coach to "where the action is" on the aprons of Terminals 1 and 2, past the runways and the cargo facilities and maintenance hangars.

Freisinger Gartentage 2012

In the tranquil, meditative surroundings of the old Neustift monastery the 16th Freising Garden Festival opens its doors on 11 May 2012. Over 120 exhibitors offering an exceptional selection of quality plants, rarities and new varieties, demonstrate why the event has become an essential date in the international gardening calendar.

This year the festival's supporting programme is devoted to Switzerland.

In Freising's Rose Gardens

Freising has a long history of horticulture and garden design in Weihenstephan – and in the colourful rose beds throughout its public parks, welcoming guests as soon as they step off the train. In the show gardens over 500 sq m in area at the centre of a small park, eighty different species of roses bloom in an intoxicating haven of tranquillity amid the bustling lanes of the old quarter. The locals know this park simply as 'Rose Island'. Completed in 2007, the naturally modelled gardens serve garden-lovers, families and children and passers-by seeking peace and retreat at the heart of the city, and were included in 2009 in the 'Architectours' given by the Bavarian Chamber of Architects. The park, with a total area of 1800 sqm, lies on a tributary of the River Moosach, a dominant feature in the city. The banks were levelled and stepped seats built in the garden area to enable visitors to enjoy the stream at close quarters.

Freising has earned special attention as a city of roses and gardens, also thanks to Weihenstephan-Triesdorf College and the beautiful grounds of the State Horticultural Research Centre at Weihenstephan: courtyard and box gardens, Oberdieckgarten, shrubbery and show gardens delight gardening fans from near and far. The famous Weihenstephan State Floristry College usually stages two stunning exhibitions annually, to the delight of culture and horticulture fans.
